the market leader in argumentative rhetorics writing arguments has proven highly successful in teaching students to read arguments critically and to produce effective arguments of their own with its student friendly tone clear explanations high interest readings and examples and well sequenced critical thinking and writing assignments writing arguments brief edition offers a time tested approach to argument that is interesting and accessible to students and eminently teachable for instructors throughout the book the authors approach argument rhetorically by emphasizing audience and context at every stage of the construction of an argument writing arguments brief edition moves students beyond a simplistic debate model of argument to a view of argument as inquiry and consensus building as well as persuasion in which the arguer negotiates with others in search of the best solutions to problems the study of argumentation has primarily focused on logical and dialectical approaches with minimal attention given to the rhetorical facets of argument rhetorical argumentation principles of theory and practice approaches argumentation from a rhetorical point of view and demonstrates how logical and dialectical considerations depend on the rhetorical features of the argumentative situation throughout this text author christopher w tindale identifies how argumentation as a communicative practice can best be understood by its rhetorical features the new rhetoric is founded on the idea that since argumentation aims at securing the adherence of those to whom it is addressed it is in its entirety relative to the audience to be influenced says chaïm perelman and l olbrechts tyteca and they rely in particular for their theory of argumentation on the twin concepts of universal and particular audiences while every argument is directed to a specific individual or group the orator decides what information and what approaches will achieve the greatest adherence according to an ideal audience this ideal perelman explains can be embodied for example in god in all reasonable and competent men in the man deliberating or in an elite like particular audiences then the universal audience is never fixed or absolute but depends on the orator the content and goals of the argument and the particular audience to whom the argument is addressed these considerations determine what information constitutes facts and reasonableness and thus help to determine the universal audience that in turn shapes the orator's approach the adherence of an audience is also determined by the orator's use of values a further key concept of the new rhetoric perelman's treatment of value and his view of epideictic rhetoric sets his approach apart from that of the ancients and of aristotle in particular aristotle's division of rhetoric into three genres forensic deliberative and epideictic is largely motivated by the judgments required for each forensic or legal arguments require verdicts on past action deliberative or political rhetoric seeks judgment on future action and epideictic or ceremonial rhetoric concerns values associated with praise or blame and seeks no specific decisions for aristotle the epideictic genre was of limited importance in the civic realm since it did not concern facts or policies perelman in contrast believes not only that epideictic rhetoric warrants more attention but that the values normally limited to that genre are in fact central to all argumentation epideictic oratory perelman argues has significant and important argumentation for strengthening the disposition toward action by increasing adherence to the values it lauds these values are central to the persuasiveness of arguments in all rhetorical genres since the orator always attempts to establish a sense of communion centered around particular values recognized by the audience responding to skeptics within higher education and critics without james crosswhite argues powerfully that the core of a college education should be learning to write a reasoned argument a trained philosopher and director of a university wide composition program crosswhite challenges his readers teachers of writing and communication philosophers critical theorists and educational administrators to reestablish the traditional role of rhetoric in education to those who have lost faith in the abilities of people to reach reasoned mutual agreements and to others who have attacked the right or wrong model of formal logic this book offers the reminder that the rhetorical tradition has always viewed argumentation as a dialogue a response to changing situations an exchange of persuading listening and understanding crosswhite's aim is to give new purpose to writing instruction and to students writing to reinvest both with the deep ethical interests of the rhetorical tradition in laying out the elements of argumentation for example he shows that claiming questioning and giving reasons are not simple elements of formal logic but communicative acts with complicated ethical features students must learn not only how to construct an argument but the purposes responsibilities and consequences of engaging in one crosswhite supports his aims through a rhetorical reconstruction of reason offering new interpretations of plato and aristotle and of the concepts of reflection and dialogue from early modernity through hegel to gadamer and in his conclusion he ties these theoretical and historical underpinnings to current problems of higher education the definition of the liberal arts and especially the teaching of written communication while legal scholars psychologists and political scientists commonly voice their skepticism over the influence oral arguments have on the court s voting pattern this book offers a contrarian position focused on close scrutiny of the justices communication within oral arguments malphurs examines the rhetoric discourse and subsequent decision making within the oral arguments for significant supreme court cases visiting their potential power and danger and revealing the rich dynamic nature of the justices interactions among themselves and the advocates in addition to offering advancements in scholars understanding of oral arguments this study introduces sensemaking as an alternative to rational decision making in supreme court arguments suggesting a new model of judicial decision making to account for the communication within oral arguments that underscores a glaring irony surrounding the bulk of related research the willingness of scholars to criticize oral arguments but their unwillingness to study this communication with the growing accessibility of the court s oral arguments and the inevitable introduction of television cameras in the courtroom this book offers new theoretical and methodological perspectives at a time when scholars across the fields of communication law psychology and political science will direct even greater attention and scrutiny toward the supreme court no matter wherestudents lives lead after graduation one of the most essential tools we can teach them is how to comprehend analyze and respond to arguments students need to know how writers and speakers choices are shaped by elements of the rhetorical situation including audience occasion and purpose in teaching arguments rhetorical comprehension critique and response jennifer fletcher provides teachers with engaging classroom activities writing prompts graphic organizers and student samples to help students at all levels read write listen speak and think rhetorically fletcher believes that with appropriate scaffolding and encouragement all students can learn a rhetorical approach to argument and gain access to rigorous academic content teaching arguments opens the door and helps them pay closer attention to the acts of meaning around them to notice persuasive strategies that might not be apparent at first glance when we analyze and develop arguments we have to consider more than just the printed words on the page we have to evaluate multiple perspectives the tension between belief and doubt the interplay of reason character and emotion the dynamics of occasion audience and purpose and how our own identities shape what we read and write rhetoric teaches us how to do these things teaching arguments will help students learn to move beyond a superficial response to texts so they can analyze and craft sophisticated persuasive arguments a major cornerstone for being not just college and career ready but ready for the challenges of the world
