in 2022 wits university press marked its centenary making it the oldest most established university press in sub saharan africa while in part modelled on scholarly publishers from the global north it has had to contend with the constraints of working under global south conditions marginalisation within the university budgetary limitations small local markets unequal access to international sales channels and the privileging of english language publishing over indigenous languages this volume explores what the press has achieved and what its modes of reinvention might look like in widening and deepening our understanding of the press as an example of a global south scholarly publisher this volume asks how publishing can contribute to a broader understanding of southern knowledge production featuring contributions from scholars publishers and authors this multi voiced volume showcases the history of the press s publishing activities over 100 years from documenting its evolution through book covers and giving credence to some of the leading black intellectuals and writers of the early 20th century and the success of those works in spite of their authors racial marginalisation to the role of women both in publishing and in the spaces afforded to women s writing on the press s list the collection concludes with essays by contemporary authors who detail not only their experiences of working with southern publishers but also the politics and influences governing their decisions to choose the press over a northern publisher publishing from the south shows the strategies deployed by the press to professionalise southern knowledge making and in the process demonstrating how university presses in the global south support the scholarly missions of their universities for both local and global audiences geophysics is a comparatively young science which only evolved as a distinct discipline during the 19th century however its phenomena like earthquakes tsunamis volcanic eruptions and lightning had been objects of fear curiosity and speculation since ancient times in this book johan de beer and his research team reveal that geophysical activity in south africa can be traced back to as early as 1488 this is a truly astonishing revelation which deserves to be firmly entrenched as part of the country s proud history the book also discusses the history and formation of south african geophysical institutions that made a huge and seldom acknowledged contribution to the technological development of southern africa an urban neighborhood remakes itself every day and unmakes itself too houses and stores and streets define it in one way but it s also people the people who make it their home some eagerly others grudgingly a neighborhood can thrive or it can decline and neighbors move in and move out sometimes they stay but withdraw behind fences and burglar alarms if a neighborhood becomes no longer a place of sociability and street life but of privacy indoors and fearful distrust outdoors is it still a neighborhood in the late 1960s and 1970s carlo rotella grew up in chicago s south shore neighborhood a place of neat bungalow blocks and desolate commercial strips and sharp sometimes painful social contrasts in the decades since the hollowing out of the middle class has left residents confronting or avoiding each other across an expanding gap that makes it ever harder for them to recognize each other as neighbors rotella tells the stories that reveal how that happened stories of deindustrialization and street life stories of gorgeous apartments with vistas onto lake michigan and of section 8 housing vouchers held by the poor at every turn south shore is a study in contrasts shaped and reshaped over the past half century by individual stories and larger waves of change that make it an exemplar of many american urban neighborhoods talking with current and former residents and looking carefully at the interactions of race and class persistence and change rotella explores the tension between residents deep investment of feeling and resources in the physical landscape of south shore and their hesitation to make a similar commitment to the community of neighbors living there blending journalism memoir and archival research the world is always coming to an end uses the story of one american neighborhood to challenge our assumptions about what neighborhoods are and to think anew about what they might be if we can bridge gaps and commit anew to the people who share them with us tomorrow is another ending
